Inspector General (IG) Complaint System and Fraud, Waste, and Abuse Program

1. The Inspector General Complaint Program is described in AF1 90-301. This instruction tells you how to make a complaint and who you should talk to. You may go to an inspector or IG at any level, but experience has shown that complaints are best solved at the lowest level by supervisors and commanders. For this reason, although not required you are encouraged to discuss you problem with your supervisor or your commander before coming to the IG.
2. The Air Force has a good complaint program. You can get help quickly and fairly when you ask a question. You can make your complaint at any level in the IG system and you do not have to worry about being intimidated when you ask for help. You can seek counsel with the Inspector without fear of harassment or repercussions from your unit. No one may take a wrong action against you just because you complained. If you think a wrong action was taken against you just because you complained, tell an inspector or an IG.
3. Some matters are not taken care of in the IG Complaints Program. These are matters where there is a way to get help under other directives. The table below shows, by subject, the procedure you must use. When one of these procedures fits your problem, you may not use the IG Complaint Program. This table does not list all the types of complaints that are handled by other appeal channels.

Type of Complaint	Reference
(Military) Discrimination Based on Race, Color, Sex, Religion, National Origin, or Sexual harassment	AFI 36-1201 Military Equal Opportunity Office

4. If a policy, directive or instruction provides a specific means of problem resolution or appeal, you should exhaust those avenues first. You must be able to allege that a process was mishandled or handled prejudicially before the IG office will process your complaint. Mere dissatisfaction with the solution to a specific problem or the outcome of an appeal is not sufficient justification for an IG investigation.
